SJPS schedules coffee chats to discuss bond proposal

St. Joseph Public Schools is launching a series of community "coffee chats" this fall to provide residents with information about its $59.9 million bond proposal, which will appear on the November 2025 ballot.

Superintendent Kristen Bawks said the informal gatherings are designed to answer questions and explain the district's priorities for the bond, which carries no increase to the current 3.7 mill tax rate. Schedules for the sessions are available at sjpsfuture.org and will also be posted on the district's main website.

The proposal follows a failed $98.5 million measure in May 2024. After that vote, the district gathered extensive public feedback and used it to reshape the plan. Community members urged the district to scale back the scope, remove an early childhood center, and focus on the most urgent needs across the district's six schools and transportation department.

According to Bawks, the new plan prioritizes infrastructure improvements, updated technology for students and teachers, and enhanced safety measures based on recommendations from a recent security audit. Projects include mechanical, electrical, HVAC, roofing, and other behind-the-scenes facility upgrades that aren't always visible from the outside.

"We're proud of how well our facilities are maintained, but there's a lot the public doesn't see," Bawks said.

"These projects are about making sure our learning environments are safe, functional, and ready for the next decade—while remaining financially responsible to taxpayers."

The district's January 2025 bond refunding helped make the proposal possible without raising the millage rate. If approved, the measure would generate nearly $60 million for facility and technology improvements.

More information, including coffee chat dates and project details, is available at sjpsfuture.org.

August Events!

Now that we've all enjoyed a Korn Dog or two, visited the animals, and checked out all the still exhibits at the Berrien County Youth Fair, it's time to jump back into all things events around Southwest Michigan. Since last week, we've added a few new things to our events calendar that we wanted to share with you.

It all kicks off on Monday, August 18th from 12:00 p.m. to 2:00 p.m. as the Southwest Michigan Regional Chamber celebrates the official welcome of Depths Society Golf (DSG - 2670 W John Beers Road, Stevensville, MI 49127) to the Chamber and Stevensville Area with a Ribbon Cutting & Hole-in-One Contest!

Speaking engagements kick off at 1:00 p.m., but the contest and celebration will run until 5:00 p.m..

DSG will have all 3 bays open while they facilitate a hole-in-one contest with live-streaming from bay 3! Folks can join the contest as they stroll in and/or participate in the action in Bays 1 & 2. If a participant makes a hole-in-one during the contest they will receive a FREE 1 Year Membership to Depths Society Golf. No sign-up needed, just show up!

Founded by Watermark Brewing Co, DSG has three Trackman-powered golf simulator bays, that combine the latest and greatest golf simulator technology with a uniquely fun and relaxing lounge-style vibe. Everyone can have fun there; whether you're a golf enthusiast or just getting started, beginner or advanced, there's something for all skill levels to enjoy. On top of fresh-brewed coffee, ready to drink canned cocktails from Watermark will now be available. Camino Ranch Water and Transfusion will be hitting the cooler this month!

While the bays are typically rented by the hour, at DSG they will close the whole house down to welcome wedding celebrations, birthday parties, team events and more, allowing you to dial in the exact vibe to maximize enjoyment across the whole space.

They are all about the contests and tournaments, and will be launching league play this October! Stay in touch by visiting their website Depthssociety.com.

Switching gears and heading to the St. Joseph-Lincoln Senior Service Center, a beacon of support for older adults and a proud anchor in our community, is thrilled to announce its 50th Anniversary Celebration, commemorating a half-century of dedication to providing enriching programs and essential services to Seniors.

Since its founding in 1975, the St. Joseph-Lincoln Senior Service Center has been a vital resource and vibrant hub for the community, providing a wide array of programs and services that promote the health, well-being, and social connection of older adults.

To mark this momentous occasion, the St. Joseph-Lincoln Senior Service Center is hosting a special Anniversary Celebration on August 25th at 3271 Lincoln Avenue. Doors will open at 9:30 a.m., with the celebration program beginning at 10:00 a.m..

The Celebration will include tours, light refreshments, a review of Center history and remarks from community leaders.

For more information about the Anniversary Celebration or to RSVP, please contact Cindi McLaughlin at (269)429-7768 or director@sjlsc.org.

Additionally, they will also be doing their 2nd Walk-A-Thon Fundraiser on Wednesday, September 3rd from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.. This all ages rain or shine event will take place on their gorgeous walking trails, and will feature music, concessions, games, and an opportunity to connect directly with nature.

If you haven't had the pleasure of enjoying the trails or experiencing everything they have to offer yet, consider this an amazing opportunity to do so! Fundraising envelopes are available at the main office, as well as information on how you can connect with over 330 members who attend their programs daily!

Pet Lover

The Pet Corner

Twenty-three years ago, I wrote my first pet column for Mailmax. The column wasn't called Pet Corner then, as someone else had started it, and I wrote as a guest. But when I took over a few months later, I gave the column a new name. Thus, Pet Corner was born. I'm amazed—but pleased—that this many years later, I'm still writing about one of my favorite topics—pets.

In my first guest column, I wrote about entering our horse in the fair, from the horse's point of view. It had been more than a few years since we'd spent a week in August at the fairgrounds, and our horse, Cato, had passed on to the big pasture in the beyond. But the memories we had of that time were still fresh. I had only to imagine how Cato felt about the entire experience, from seeing chickens for the first time, to falling asleep in the show ring, to nibbling on an elephant ear. I always thought he enjoyed the time spent at the fair, except for maybe the loud noise of the monster trucks. I'm sure his favorite part, though, was arriving back at the barn at the end of the long week and being allowed to run through the pasture again.

If you attended the Berrien County Youth Fair this past week, I hope you had a chance to visit the booths sponsored by the local shelters and rescue groups. If you are reading this before you go, be sure to check out Berrien County Animal Services as well as Paws of Hope and Animal Aid in the commercial barns. They always have fun items for purchase, and all proceeds from those sales go to help support the animals looking for new homes, of which there are many. Our shelters are filling up and pet fosters are taking in more and more animals that were surrendered or turned up as strays and nobody claimed. If you are not able to adopt but would still like an animal companion, consider becoming a foster. Spending time in a home with caring humans can help many pets become socialized and ready them for a new forever family. But be aware of what is called "foster fail." That is when you fall so completely in love with a foster pet, you simply must keep them forever. It often happens.

With kids heading back to school soon, you might find your pets, especially dogs, feeling a little out of sorts. They've become used to more attention and time spent with them over the summer, and now, suddenly, they're left alone more often. Give them a little grace and time to adjust to new schedules and maybe offer some extra affection and playtime whenever possible. I believe that, given half a chance, most pets adjust to change without too much difficulty.

Adoptable cats and kittens will visit the Bridgman Open Air Market on Sunday, August 24, courtesy of Animal Aid. No matter what age or color you are looking for, I'm sure they will have one of your choosing. They have reduced adoption fees at the Berrien County Animal Services shelter for the month of August. Dogs are $30; cats, $15; barn cats, $5. Empty the shelters!

How to Best Remove Ear Wax

We've all heard the adage, "Don't stick anything smaller than your elbow in your ear!" in regards to cleaning our ears. While this may seem sort of cheesy or hokey, the reality is that the statement stands true. If you feel like you have water or ear wax in your ears, you should not put any small object in your ears to remove it. Today I would like to discuss what ear wax is, some techniques to remove ear wax at home, and then what we as audiologists can do to help.

What is ear wax? Ear wax, also known as cerumen, is perfectly natural and normal. Ear wax is created by glands in our outer ears and is often a combination of the secretions from these glands, sweat, skin oils, dry skin, as well as dirt or debris from external sources. Ear wax or cerumen functions to help remove foreign material such as dirt, hair, etc from our ears and can also help to protect us from bacteria or fungi. Ear wax can become problematic when it builds up excessively in our ears and either partially or completely blocks or occludes our ear canals. This can lead to the sensation of muffled or reduced hearing, and in some cases can cause dizziness or tinnitus. Excessive ear wax can also trap moisture in the ears which can lead to potential ear infections. So what can we do to help prevent excessive wax build up?

When patients ask me how to best remove wax from their ears at home, my answer is typically going to be hydrogen peroxide. Now this comes with a couple of caveats, if you have ever had a perforated ear drum, either in the past or currently, then you should not use peroxide to remove cerumen because this can cause pain and discomfort. If you're not sure if you have a perforated ear drum, then you should have your ears checked prior to using peroxide. When using peroxide, I recommend 5-10 drops, letting sit for 10 minutes, and then carefully irrigating the ear while in the shower or with warm water in a bulb syringe, working one ear at a time.

In our office, we offer cerumen removal for both new and current patients. We have several methods of wax removal available including irrigation, suction, or manual removal. The first thing we will do when you come in for ear wax removal is look in your ears with video otoscopy, both to evaluate your ear anatomy and the amount of cerumen in your ears, as well as to show you exactly what we are looking at. We then decide which wax removal method will be best for you. For irrigation, we have a special machine made just for ear irrigation called the Earigator (clever I know). This machine has controlled temperature and pressure and is painless. Manual removal or scooping is our second most common method, with suction being less common.

If you or someone you someone you love may have ear wax or hearing loss, call our office today to schedule your free hearing screening at (269) 982-3444.

A Legacy of Community: The History of the Berrien County Youth Fair

As we close out another year at the Berrien County Youth Fair, held August 11-16, 2025, in Berrien Springs, it's a fitting time to reflect on the rich history of this cherished institution. For over seven decades, the fair has been a cornerstone of Southwest Michigan, evolving from a modest agricultural showcase into a vibrant celebration of youth, agriculture, and community spirit.

The Berrien County Youth Fair traces its roots to 1945, when local farmers, educators, and 4-H leaders sought to create an event celebrating the region's agricultural heritage. Held initially in a small field near Berrien Springs, the first fair focused on livestock shows and crop displays, drawing a few hundred attendees. Organized by the newly formed Berrien County Youth Fair Association, the event aimed to foster agricultural education and provide a platform for young people to showcase their skills. Early fairs featured competitions in dairy cattle, vegetable gardening, and home economics, reflecting the rural character of the county.

By the 1950s, the fair had outgrown its original site, leading to its relocation to the current fairgrounds on Lake Street. This move allowed for expanded exhibits, carnival rides, and larger crowds. The 1960s saw the fair's reputation grow, with the introduction of the annual livestock auction, which became a vital fundraiser for 4-H programs. The auction empowered youth to develop financial literacy while supporting future fair initiatives. During this era, the fair also began incorporating entertainment, with local bands and tractor pulls drawing families from across Southwest Michigan.

The 1970s and 1980s marked a period of modernization. The fairgrounds gained permanent structures, including barns and an amphitheater, enhancing the visitor experience. The inclusion of FFA (Future Farmers of America) alongside 4-H broadened participation, while new categories like photography and robotics reflected changing times. By the 1990s, the fair was attracting over 100,000 visitors annually, cementing its status as one of Michigan's premier youth fairs.

In recent decades, the fair has embraced innovation while honoring tradition. The 2000s introduced STEM exhibits, showcasing advancements like sustainable farming and drone technology. The Kids' Zone, launched in 2010, added interactive activities to engage younger audiences. Despite challenges like economic shifts and weather disruptions, the fair's volunteer-driven spirit has remained steadfast, with hundreds of locals contributing each year.

The 2025 fair, with its 1,500 youth exhibitors and diverse attractions, reflects the legacy of those early gatherings. From humble beginnings to a regional treasure, the Berrien County Youth Fair continues to unite generations, celebrating the ingenuity of youth and the enduring pride of Berrien County's agricultural roots. As plans for 2026 take shape, the fair's history inspires a future of growth and community connection.

See you next year at the fair.

I See You

"I see you!" When parents and children play peek-a-boo, the point is not to hide but to be seen. The best part is the glow on the infant's face when you look on with loving eyes. There is real joy in being seen.

"I see you!" When that child is sneaky in behavior, the glow is gone, and either shame or defensiveness defines the facial features. The eyebrows furrow, and the smile is gone—unless it is the sly smile that masks the mind working on an excuse.

God can see you. Which one of the above do you feel most often when you hear this?

"Can anyone hide in secret places so that I cannot see him?" declares the Lord. "Do I not fill heaven and earth?" declares the Lord. (Jeremiah 23:24)

The answer to the first question is, "No." No one can hide from God. He can see it all. How? Because the answer to the second question is, "Yes." God can see it all because He fills heaven and earth. He is not hiding in or as part of the cloud, tree, picture frame, or chair. But God is everywhere.

When you think no one is watching as you divert your work time to personal use, he sees. When your eyes wander to people and things that are not yours, he sees. When you stew over how you will tear apart that other person in your next confrontation, he sees.

This is when we want to hide. We often use self-medication and denial as our hiding strategy. Our attempts at hiding are like the infant burying her face in her tiny palms, thinking she is out of sight. He still sees you.

But God doesn't see you to shame you. Yes, he will confront you when needed, but not to shame you. (Shame is a feeling I produce in myself, not something someone else can make me feel). When you look deeper into his gaze, you see love behind those eyes. They are the eyes of compassion that Jesus had for the crowds, who were like lost sheep without a shepherd. They are the eyes that pierce through your defensiveness to see your need for help. They are the eyes of Jesus from the cross—swollen from beatings and tears—like a protective lover willing to take all the hits from the attacker to protect you. They are the eyes that opened in the dark tomb three days after he died, awake, alive, and unshaken by death.

God sees you when you hurt, and he knows what that is like. God sees you and smiles over you because he looks through the perfection of his Son and sees you as perfect. God sees you when you laugh, and he is laughing with you. God sees you when you feel all alone because he loves you too much to leave you alone. God sees you.

Now that you know his constant gaze is intended in love, how does that empower you?

Dear Lord, thank you for watching over me. So many times, I have wandered off and yet you keep your eye on me. Fill me with your forgiving love so I don't feel shame and keep me from anything that can cause me to dishonor you. Amen.

Kiernan says having an up to date and complete master plan is a best practice to make the community more attractive to developers.

"We want to make sure that we have all of the resources that are available to developers easily accessible," Kiernan said. "So if people look at Bridgman and they are thinking about making an investment here, they can immediately see who they need to talk to."

And Kiernan says at the CGA, there has been an uptick in interest in Bridgman.

"And I spend a good deal of my time making sure that people have all of the information they need about a building that they might be interested in, about a particular parcel they might be interested in, and about the incentives that the city is able to bring to get people to invest here."

The CGA will work with the city to update the master plan to help those investors get the information and support they need when they come to town. Kiernan says the grant is a direct result of the city and the CGA working together.

The two partners will now get to work on the master plan and develop ways to keep the public engaged.

Leadership Accelerator Program Launching in South Haven

Registration opens August 19 for the first Leadership Accelerator course to be offered in South Haven, an 11-week program designed to strengthen leadership skills across industries and the community.

Hosted by the South Haven Regional Business Hub, the program is aimed at emerging leaders, established professionals, seasoned executives looking to refine their skills, community advocates, and forward-thinking visionaries.

"This is about growing our local economy by developing stronger leaders," said Debbie Howe, board chair of the South Haven Regional Business Hub. "All industries need strong leaders to design a vision for where we're headed. This program helps participants identify and accelerate their strengths, communicate effectively, and build collaborative relationships."

The course begins with strength-based leadership and covers topics including effective communication, team dynamics, and community engagement. It's administered by Purpose Partners and presented in collaboration with Lake Michigan College – South Haven Campus and the Southwest

Krasl Art Center welcomes three new team members

The Krasl Art Center in St. Joseph has added three professionals to its leadership and creative team, strengthening its capacity in marketing, development, and curation.

Madison Cvengros joined in April as Marketing Manager, bringing a digital media perspective and experience in visual storytelling, video, and traditional marketing strategies.

Starting the same month, Monica Garvey became Development Manager. With a background in communications, she aims to connect Krasl and the Richard Hunt Studio Center to the wider Southwest Michigan community, build partnerships, and expand the region's arts network.

In late July, Meli Bandera assumed the role of Associate Curator. A curator, educator, and fine artist, Bandera contributed immediately to the opening of Hull-House Artists in Chicago and Beyond.

Executive Director and Chief Curator Tami Fauver praised the hires, noting Krasl's collaborative culture and the dedication each new team member has shown since joining.

"We have a special work culture at Krasl that I am proud of. Working here requires a strong work ethic, an openness to people and art, and an ability to work collaboratively internally and throughout the community," said Fauver.

The Krasl Art Center serves St. Joseph, Benton Harbor, and the surrounding area with exhibitions, arts programming, and community engagement. More information is available at www.krasl.org.

Mavis Chiropractic Center welcomes 2nd generation to practice

After 41 years in chiropractic practice in Southwest Michigan, Dr. Marc Mavis is marking another milestone.

Mavis is welcoming his son, Dr. Jake Mavis into the practice, after Jake's graduation this year, with honors, from Palmer College of Chiropractic in Davenport, Iowa. Palmer is one of the foremost chiropractic colleges in the world. Marc Mavis is a Palmer grad as well, Class of 1984.

Mavis Chiropractic Center, 2550 Niles Road, St. Joseph opened in 1988, after Dr. Marc spent several initial years of practice in partnership with Doctors Vince Ackerman and John Cox in the area before opening his own practice.

Mavis told us that with the addition of Dr. Jake, they have expanded into additional space in their building and added new digital x-ray equipment to enhance patient service. He reflected on his 41 years in the practice, saying, "It's flown by... because we love what we do, helping patients." And, he expressed deep and strong pride in Jake's

Dave Says

Don't Kick a Guy When He's Down (but Don't Let Him Throw a Pity Party, Either)

Dear Dave,

Our son used to own and run his own small business, until it went bankrupt a few months ago. We let him move in with us, because he hasn't been able to find another job and had nowhere else to turn. My husband and I are both getting close to retirement age, and we're not sure what to do in order to get our son on his feet and back out in the world again.

Elisabeth

Dear Elisabeth,

As a parent, I understand where you're coming from. You don't want to kick a kid when he's down, but you don't want to participate in, or allow him to wallow around in, a bunch of self-pity. Everyone needs a little time to catch their breath when really bad things happen. But right now, you need to help him reset his mind and start taking practical steps toward being a productive, self-sufficient adult again.

First off, let's define what helping your son really means. In my mind, you haven't helped him at all if he's still living with you a year from now. That's called being an enabler. But it's not going to help him if you just shove him out the door saying, "You're a man! Handle it!" I think you and your husband—together—should formulate a progressive plan somewhere between those two extremes. One that includes a deadline date for him to move out, but in the meantime helps him rebuild his dignity and self-respect.

As part of living with you, I'd require him to do a few things. One is that he abides by your household rules. If he's going to live in your home, he should help out around the place and behave in ways you and your husband consider appropriate. Another, is thinking about career steps. He could start with a part-time job to get some money in his pockets. Then, help him actively work on long-term career goals and how to attain them.

And don't let him neglect his physical and mental wellbeing during all this. He needs to be engaged in some kind of regular physical activity, even if you and your husband pay for it temporarily. An inexpensive gym membership, or used exercise equipment would be a great start. Exercise also stimulates the mind, and he needs that right now, too.

Going through what your son has experienced is tough on anyone, at any age. It can lead to depression if you don't engage regularly in activities and goal setting. Encourage him, Elisabeth. Walk with him during this time. If he's not involved with a good church, this would be a great time for him to start looking for one.

Your son has plenty of productive years ahead of him. He just needs a little love and support to get him back on his feet and moving again.

— Dave

Greece Is the Word (Is the Word, etc.)

Shoot, does that headline give it all away, that the next stop on my Mediterranean sojourn is Athens?

In Grecian waters the night before we docked, our group – my wife, her four sibs, one GF, her dad, and me – dolled up for portraits on the ship's central stairway. We posed for a lot of shots, and not to brag, but my hair and my smile were (tip o' the cap to John Mellencamp) at their Greece-iest.

Later that evening, strolling through one of the ship's restaurants, I noticed some surprising wall art: Enormous enlarged prints of our group posed on the ship's central stairway!

Haha! Not really! I saw enormous enlarged prints of baseball cards, of all things. From the early 1900s, of all things. Among the players featured were Ty Cobb; Chicago Cub Ed Reulbach (who once pitched two shutouts against the Brooklyn Dodgers. . .on the SAME DAY!); and Chicago Cub Joe Tinker, the Hall-of-Famer of "Tinker to Evers to Chance" fame.

Those little historical factoids serve as my wafer-thin-relevant segue to the somewhat less recent historical sights we saw in Greece: The Parthenon, The Erechtheion, aka the Temple of Athena Polias, the Odeon of Herodus Atticus, the Temple of Poseidon.

As you might expect, we took a LOT of photos at these places, even though there were no central stairways. Unfortunately, many of these shots show our group with closed eyes and mouths saying "ch-." But thanks to my cellphone's Clean Up feature, I erased them!

However, there are six figures I didn't erase from my Temple of Athena Polias pix. They're statues, called The Maidens of the Acropolis. They're all dressed alike, sorta like a 1960s girl pop group, but with subtle differences to show they're six distinct women. One thing they have in common: They're fake; the originals are in museums to protect them from pollution, weathering, and selfies with current girl pop groups.

Though slightly enervated by the extended bout of nostalgia of ancient Greece, we still noticed other interesting (to me anyway) modern sights around Athens:

• Near the city's Hilton Hotel is a 30-foot-tall sculpture made of plate glass and iron that depicts a person running. It's called – well, whadja expect? – "The Runner." Looking at it, you perceive someone running FAST; the layering of thousands of glass plates gives it the look of "blurred motion."

It's not a unanimously popular statue. It was moved from its original location due to protests from people living near it. "Bad aesthetics" were cited. I'd think the bigger concern oughta be the VERY sharp and jagged plate glass! The difficulty of working with it is why the artist gave six years to creating it. Also three fingers.

Finishing up my day back aboard ship, I wandered into the library, which was filled with a fair number of oddball books. The cream of the crop looked to be "Where the Game Matters Most," by Williams Gildea – a tome devoted entirely to the history of high school basketball in Indiana!

But then I noticed two books – literally side by side – bearing COMPLETELY polar opposite titles: "Owning It," and "Faking It"!

(Author's note: Another tactic that I recco -- if you can't own it OR fake it, use Clean Up and erase it!)
